"Carthusians indoors, Apostles outdoors"

Many of us are about to enter a 'new' year. The diary is already filling up with engagements, initiatives, plans...

The key word seems to be 'prioritization' and 'time management'.

Here for you (and me) a motto quoted by Pope Francis last week:

"Be Carthusians indoors and apostles outdoors".

Yes, first of all, we need to learn to 'stay' with God every day. 'Staying' means finding time and space for God, silence, adoration, prayer, listening to His Word. Let us not deceive ourselves: without God we cannot remain standing, none of us: everyone has his or her own fragilities and without the Lord to sustain us we would not stand. Our priesthood, our married life, our chastity, our mission, our apostolic zeal... will not survive without 'staying' with the Lord.

I wish you a 'new' year... indoors and outdoors!

In manus.
