

Reflection on this weekend's readings

'Anyone who welcomes one of these little children in my name, welcomes me'

By putting his arms around a child Jesus was trying to show the disciples in really concrete ways who he is, i.e., the one who is least among us, the most vulnerable and who has come to serve. Jesus tells them that if they want to be first, if they want to be leaders, they must be the servant of all. Jesus identifies himself with a child and then, also with God! What if we imagined the Afghan children now in our midst to be the child Jesus embraced? That they are the face of Jesus for us today? That as disciples it is our task to serve them? That if we welcome and serve them, we are welcoming and serving Jesus? And, in welcoming and serving Jesus we are welcoming and serving God! Jesus told the disciples that we must be the servant of all — not just some. What if we were to include our common home in our understanding of 'all'.

What would happen if we were to behave as servants of the land, the rivers, the oceans, the lakes, the forests, the sky, the plants, the animals, the birds, the fish, all the endangered species, etc? What if we imagined they were all people, all our sisters and brothers and that they all had a voice? What would they ask us to do for them? How would they want us to serve them?

So, let's take some time this week to listen to our common home with all our senses. Maybe we will hear its various elements cry. Let's listen to the voice of the Afghan children now among us and see there the face of Jesus. The cry of the earth and the cry of the poor are connected, and we are called to be servants of both.

If anyone wishes to be first, he shall be the last of all and the servant of all.

Who is greatest? Who is first?

Jesus, you were born in a stable needing everything, having only life.

Then you were on the cross, needing everything, having no life.

Yet you are the greatest of all.

You taught the disciples as you journeyed through Galilee.

Teach us to love you, to care for your children, to serve your poor, to welcome the immigrant, to free the prisoner.

Lord, we ask you, give us only your grace.
