+ 5TH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME - YEAR C

“Whom shall I send? . . . Here I am; send me.” (Isaiah 6.9)

Every Christian has been baptized into Christ (Gal. 3.27; Rom. 6.3; Col. 2.12). As a result, the Christian is one with Christ, sharing both His life and His threefold priestly, kingly, and prophetic mission. So, by that baptism, the Christian is a missionary charged with the task of leading others to Christ (St Thomas Aquinas). The Christian is sent into society by Our Lord, just as He Himself was sent into the world by the Father (Jn 20.21; 17.18), to bring people to be saved through the knowledge of the truth (1 Tim. 2.4). This obligation to missionary arises from the love of God that has been poured into our hearts (Rom. 5.5), which compels us (2 Cor. 5.14) to share with others the faith in Christ that we ourselves received through baptism. Depending on our particular states in life (as bishops, clergy, consecrated people, and laity), we share at different levels in the one mission Our Lord entrusted to the Church. Due to their own circumstance as those who deal with the world on a daily basis, the laity have the duty primarily to engage in and direct the affairs of society according to the will of God, and to ensure that the gospel is preached to all in the world (CCC, 898, 900). They do this in two principal ways: by consecrating the world to God through the daily testimony of their holy lives (cf. 1 Pt 2.5); and by announcing Christ to others by their words of mouth. Some of them may also wish to and undertake foreign missions. In whichever way, they share in the mission of the Church as ‘missionary disciples’ – a term used by Pope Francis in his first encyclical, Evangelii Gaudium (‘The Joy of the Gospel’). As disciples, they, like Mary, always sit at the feet of Our Lord, listening to Him and learning from His teaching (Lk 10.39), and never presuming at any point to be greater than their Teacher (Mt 20.24; Lk 6.40; Jn 13.16). As missionaries, they ought to remain utterly faithful to Christ, and never presume to be greater than the One who sent them (Jn 13.16).
