

I just want to start off by saying thank you for everyone who has attended, from Kajetan's family to his friend's and all people involved within his life. He would be so proud to see all the lives he's enriched and all the separate memories he had made with you individually.

I feel no need to make this a sombre speech but a celebration of Kajetan's life which I know he would have wanted. Fate can be described as the development of events outside a person's control but on the contrary this is something I believe he brought everywhere. He had this unmatched ability to bring people's lives together and wherever he went in life good fate followed him. This could be from incredibly simple things such as his presence, his cheeky smile or his charisma but wherever he was taken he had the ability to light up a room. He carried the world along his shoulders and was the most grounded person I had the privilege of ever meeting.

I'm eternally grateful for all the beautiful memories I got to spend with him such as going to Brighton, for the music festivals and most importantly his gentle demeanour and his loving character. But when I was writing this it became clear to me that it is not all about the fancy things which cost a lot of money I enjoyed doing with him, but the little things which he brought to my life ie: The smile on my face when he asked me to go out and he was like my brother supporting me through the highest of my highs and the lowest of my lows.

We may not have been related but he could have been the closest person to me other than my family and I would have recognised him as my blood. We spoke like brothers did and argued like brothers did but only having each others best intentions at heart. I found a level of friendship which I thought was unattainable with anyone.

I want to thank everyone who helped support him throughout his journey and all the activities he loved doing including dance, basketball and trading. He had so much left to give and provide to this world which any regular person could not have imagined. He always used to talk to me how school helped him develop and mature as a person and I was so excited to see what he could bring to the world. I would like to give a special mention to my economics teacher Mr Tucker who helped to ignite Kajetan's love for investment and the subject as I'm sure he would have been one of the foreboding reasons for his success within life and in him driving around in flashy cars and living in Canary Wharf.

Kajetan always taught me important life lessons and one that especially sticks by me is his expression through music. There would not be a single time in the day with or without him where he was not listening to music and I truly believe this gave him a better outlook and understanding of the world.

I would never have told him this but he had the intelligence of a full grown man in a body which still had so much yet to understand.

There's actually one thing that I will never regret forcing on him and that was re-igniting his love for Chelsea again. Faintly, remembering all the finals and games we watched on the TV and whenever Chelsea scored the smile on his face which could enlighten anyone. I would give the world just to see that smile one more time.

I was even lucky enough just to see one last Chelsea game with him this season and the palpable excitement on his face made me feel most likely like my dad when I got into football. We shared so much in common and Kajetan was so talented in the regard that he was relatable to people and it was such a vital skill which I don't even think he saw in himself.

He was so modest and had all the qualities that anyone who would be successful in life needed. I'm grateful for all the times we partied together and walked home at 3 in the morning. The time I drank too much and cycled into a lamppost and split my hand open and of course he was there as the first person to help me.

The amazing group of friends we spent last summer with, sitting under the summer sun enjoying life as any child should. I recall all the late nights in Cambridge with him going out because we were bored and should have been revising for our A level mocks, but I am so grateful that I got to spend that time with him and I would have not had it any other way. To put everything in perspective he was my first friend and walked over to me in reception and ever since then a formidable friendship was created. He helped me achieve so many things within my life such as being a more confident person and not being annoyed at everyone for one silly mistake. He's even the reason I'm with my girlfriend now.

It's upsetting to think about all the things that were yet to come, but then I remember everything that we had already achieved together.

I would like to thank Gemma and Janusz for being like second parents to me with all the amount of time I spent in their house in the last few years I should be paying rent to them. Similarly, thank you Fabian you were like my little brother as we would sometimes go out all together.

Finally, I want you all to continue the legacy of Kajetan as everything I achieve in life will be in his name. He will remain by all of your sides and it is unfathomable how much he loved all of you not then not now but forever.

Kajetan będzie na zawsze w naszych sercach. (In Polish – Kajetan will be forever in our hearts)
