Letter from Langdon Street

My dear people

Today we celebrate the moment when Our Lord took leave of the apostles to return to his Father. In this country we celebrate it on the Sunday after the traditional fortieth day after Easter.

The story of the Gospels is the story of Jesus Christ the son of God and the son of Mary. He was born in Bethlehem the supposed son of a carpenter in Nazareth. When he was baptised in the River Jordan he began his mission to reveal himself as the long awaited Messiah. His public ministry lasted less than three years and he was rejected by the religious leaders who could have played a major part in that ministry. He was brutally treated and crucified like a common criminal. That was not the end. Instead, three days later, he rose from the dead and appeared to some of his followers over a period of forty days. During that time he prepared them for an important work, to continue the mission he had begun, to proclaim good news to all the nations and to baptise them into a new and eternal life in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit.

The religious leaders had assumed that by getting rid of Our Lord, all memories of him would quickly fade. How wrong they were. When Jesus returned to his Father on Ascension Day, the apostles were told to go back to Jerusalem and wait for the coming of the Advocate, the Paraclete, the Holy Spirit. For nine days, in company with Mary, the Mother of Jesus and other men and women, they spent time in prayer, the very first novena. Their experience of Our Lord had changed their lives. They were about to become the Church, a gathering together of a community that recognise Jesus as the Son of God. They were about to break out of the security and protection of the Upper Room, where Pope Francis celebrated mass a week ago, to become a new presence of Jesus in our world. They would bring good news to all the peoples of the world. Their mission is now our mission. Like Jesus at his baptism and the apostles at Pentecost we have received the same Spirit that they received. When Jesus said goodbye he reassured them that he would be with them always, even to the end of the world.

The feast of the Ascension has been designated as World Communications Day. There will be a special collection during mass for the committee of the Bishops' Conference that promotes the work of communicating the good news of the Gospel. I often think that St Paul would have revelled in using twitter, facebook and any other modern way of getting his message across to as many people as possible. He would not have settled on just writing letters.

During these last days leading up to Pentecost it has been customary to pray for Christian Unity. We should also pray for a renewed outpouring of the Holy Spirit into our hearts. No matter what difficulties and disappointments life throws at us, Our Lord also had difficulties and disappointments. After his death he rose from the dead and ascended to his Father. This is also our destiny. Let us pray for a renewed sense of faith, hope and love so that we may bring these precious gifts to others, especially those whose lives we touch today and every day during the coming week.

.Yours sincerely

Parish Priest
