Letter from Langdon Street

My dear people

Today we hear another parable from Our Lord about prayer and our attitude to prayer. We hear about two men who go up to the Temple to pray. The Pharisee went to tell God what a wonderful person he was, obeying the law completely, fasting and doing everything a good Pharisee ought to do. Unfortunately, instead of praising God in his prayer he was praising himself. Not only that, he compared himself with the man near him, a man he despised, a tax collector. The tax collector knew exactly who he was and what he was, a sinner, an outcast despised by his fellow Jews. All he could do was to bow his head and ask for forgiveness: "Lord, be merciful to me, a sinner." Jesus said that it was the tax collector who went home at rights with God.

When Pope Francis proclaimed this year as the Year of Mercy, he wanted us to understand the power of mercy. William Shakespeare puts it beautifully in his play The Merchant of Venice where Portia says:

The quality of mercy is not strain'd,
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath: it is twice blest;
It blesseth him that gives and him that takes:
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest: it becomes
The throned monarch better than his crown;
His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,
The attribute to awe and majesty,

Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;
But mercy is above this sceptred sway;
It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,
It is an attribute to God himself;
And earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice

The Pharisees were members of a sect of Judaism active in Jesus' time. They taught a special interpretation of the Law of Moses as the basis for Jewish piety. Some of the Pharisees stand out as good and devout people such as Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus. If anyone would be a model for prayer, it should have been the Pharisee in the Temple. Tax collectors were collaborators with the Roman authorities in a system that allowed the tax collectors to line their own pockets by charging in excess of the defined taxes. Yet, in this parable, Jesus offers the humility of the tax collector as a model for the prayer of a disciple, not the example of the Pharisee. The parable reminds us that when we pray, we must remember our need for God in our lives. If we are too full of ourselves, there is too little room for God's grace to work in us.

Today's epistle reminds us of the deep love shown by St Paul, another Pharisee who was proud of being a Pharisee. Many of his epistles begin and end in prayer. Today he shows us of his friendship with Timothy whom he put in charge of the Christian community (which he calls the Church) in Ephesus. He mentions Timothy's mother Eunice and his grandmother

Lois and describes how they are all bound together in faith. The pagans in Ephesus prayed to their local goddess Artemis and believed that the more prayers they said and the faster they said them would be pleasing to her. Our Lord warned his disciples not to pray as the pagans do who believe that "the more they say the more chance they have of being heard." For us, prayer is talking to God. Prayer and faith are very closely connected. It's because we have faith that we pray. We need to pray not just when we are in trouble but at all times. Prayer is not an escape from life but a journey into the heart of life, a life of grace and a life of mercy. In this Year of Mercy we are encouraged to be merciful as God is merciful. Pope Francis talks about the Church, especially in our parish and all other parishes as "an oasis of mercy" Part of our personal mission is to invite others into our "oasis of mercy" when we have drunk from the fountain of mercy ourselves.

Yours sincerely

Parish Priest

CAFOD APPEAL

Thank you for your response to the CAFOD Harvest Appeal which raised £405.79.

WORLD MISSION SUNDAY

It has been over twenty years since the genocide that devastated Rwanda. And while the saying 'time is a great healer' may ring true, many people across this small African nation are still in need of practical, spiritual and emotional support. The Pope's official charity for overseas mission, is appealing to the faithful this year to help heal the broken-hearted, especially the people of Rwanda, some of whom are still traumatised by what happened. It is hard to imagine that in the space of one hundred days one million people were killed.

There are some wounds so deep in human experience that they require the healing touch of God's love. The Church with its vital ministry of caring for victims of senseless and appalling violence allows God's grace to heal those whose lives are broken. World Mission Sunday is celebrated by Catholics in every country where the Church is present. Today parishes all over the world will be encouraged to pray for the missionary work of the Church and share what they can to support faith communities overseas which are in urgent need. There will be a special collection at mass today.
