Speaking Out

For someone who has been abused in childhood, the prospect of speaking out about it, perhaps after years of silence, can be frightening. We want to offer you that opportunity now.

There may be many reasons why you have not spoken out before:-

- You were afraid your concerns would not be taken seriously.
- You were afraid you would not be believed.
- You felt it may cause problems for your family.
- You felt ashamed.
- You were afraid you would be blamed.
- You felt it may damage your relationships in the Church community.

We know from experience that all the above reasons and more, have prevented others in the past from speaking out about their abuse for many years.

We also know that for many, having the courage to speak out is a first step on the road to healing and recovery for the hurt they feel. It is also often the way to achieve justice.

You are not to blame for what happened to you. You will be listened to and your concerns will be taken seriously and acted upon as necessary.

Who should I contact?

Every Diocese in England & Wales has a Diocesan Safeguarding Office, which reports to the Diocesan Safeguarding Commission. Each office has a Safeguarding Co-ordinator. Contact details can be found on the back of this leaflet.

Alternatively you could contact an independent support organisation. Details can be found on the back of this leaflet.

How to contact us

- If you ring the Safeguarding Office you will be able to speak directly and in private to the Safeguarding Co-ordinator.
- You may do this by phone or you can arrange to meet with the Safeguarding Co-ordinator at a mutually convenient location.

What happens when you contact us?

- You will be listened to and what you have to say will be taken seriously.
- You will be offered support if you wish to report to the police and you have not already done so.
- You will be dealt with in a confidential manner; however, in the interest of safeguarding others, some matters may need to be referred to the statutory authorities.

- The Safeguarding Co-ordinator will discuss with you whether there is any immediate help or support you may need and will assist you in trying to access this.
- You will be given a named contact person and telephone number.
- You will be contacted regularly about the progress of any action agreed with you.
- You will be informed about any outcome of the work being done.
- You will be helped to access the support you may need including specialist services.

What is the Safeguarding Commission?

The Commission is made up of members drawn from Social Services, the Police, Clergy and other statutory agencies. This group of men and women, church and non church members, are committed to making the Catholic Church a safe environment for children, young people and vulnerable adults.
